"Greece Asks for Justice" is the title of a moving appeal which united Greek societies in America are sending out to every Greek in the land. Has been in Barre the appeal has been received with open arms and local Greeks are planning to give the pronouncement the widest publicity. In the appeal the atrocities of the Bulgarians are set forth in vivid colors and countrymen of the Hellenic fighting men and citizenry are asked to protest by word of mouth and through the press the support which civilized nations are according Bulgaria through their missionaries as well as financiers. The appeal describes the horrors that accompanied the allies' triumph at Loule-Bourgas, when wild Tartars from the Bulgarian minions ruthlessly slaughtered non-participants of the battle, regardless of their race or creed.

Vinitia lodge, No. 10, Knights of Pythias, was entertained at the lodge rooms in the Blanchard building last evening by the newly elected officers. The affair took the form of a smoke talk with a buffet luncheon. Several members joined in an informal discussion of pertinent issues of the day and latterly the conversation turned to the 50th anniversary of Pythian knighthood, which occurs early in February. Pythians from all parts of Canada and the United States will gather in Washington for a celebration, but last night's discussion contemplates only a local observance along pretentious lines. No definite arrangements were made, but a consensus of opinion seemed to favor some appropriate celebration. It is likely that the tentative plans will take shape within a few days.

The ladies' aid society met one day in every week in the last church where I became a member. The people were cordial enough on the day that we met to sew and have luncheon together, but very few of them would remember me if I met me elsewhere, even at the Sunday morning services, which my husband and I attended regularly. If I spoke to them outside of these one-a-week meetings they would look at me in amazement and wonder. It is needless to say that my letter did not remain in that church longer than three years; at the end of that time I was frozen through and through, and I have not been able to find a church since that is warm enough to thaw me out.

Says the Church is Too Cold for Her.

In the February Woman's Home Companion, Bruce Barton writes an intensely interesting article entitled "Why Fifty Women Do Not Go to Church."

Mr. Barton wrote to several hundred representative women living in various parts of the country, asking for a candid expression of opinion. About two-thirds of those he asked did not answer the questions at all. Of those who did answer, a quarter no longer attend church. That means—if the same percentage may be supposed to prevail throughout the women's club membership of the country—that one club woman in every four, a woman of leadership and talent (for these were officers of women's clubs, not mere members) has made up her mind that church attendance contributes nothing to her own development or the development of the community which justifies her in continuing it. Only a few laid the blame at their own doors. The rest blamed the church, either that it was too cold, or too reactionary, or too neglectful. Following is a letter from one woman, who found the church too chilly to suit her:

"The ladies' aid society met one day in every week in the last church where I became a member. The people were cordial enough on the day that we met to sew and have luncheon together, but very few of them would remember me if I met me elsewhere, even at the Sunday morning services, which my husband and I attended regularly. If I spoke to them outside of these one-a-week meetings they would look at me in amazement and wonder. It is needless to say that my letter did not remain in that church longer than three years; at the end of that time I was frozen through and through, and I have not been able to find a church since that is warm enough to thaw me out."

There will be a special meeting of the city council Thursday evening at 7 o'clock for the purpose of hearing the balance of the departmental reports to be included in the annual city report. Last night three reports were not ready for ratification.

The condition of Superintendent H. E. Reynolds of the water department, who has been detained at his home on Washington street for several days by an attack of diphtheria, was reported to be slightly improved this forenoon. He will be unable to resume his duties at city hall for another week, at least.

Barre council, No. 401, Knights of Columbus, received notification yesterday from Past Deputy D. J. Donnelly of Montpelier that the annual installation of officers will be held on Wednesday evening, Feb. 4. After the regular meeting next week the first of a series of social entertainments which have been arranged for the winter will be held.

This evening at the Church street gymnasium the big annual basketball game will be played between Goddard seminary and Spaulding high school. The largest crowd of the season is expected. The teams appear very evenly matched and it will undoubtedly be a hard fought struggle. The lineup of the Spaulding team will be as follows: Levin, captain, and Tomasi, forwards; Carroll, center; Hooker and Oliver, guards. Coach Kurtz will send out the following men: Witt and Keefe, guards; Cooby, center; Tierney and Lemay, forwards. The selection of the officials for the game will not be made until just previous to the games.

The platform which the Socialist party of Barre is to use in the coming municipal campaign will be one of the interesting subjects of discussion when the city central committee and the ward committees of the two locals in this city meet together Thursday evening. The meeting will be held upstairs in the Socialist auditorium on Granite street at 7:30 o'clock. Much important work on the platform has been accomplished already, but much remains to be done. It is hoped to have the platform completely drafted by the end of Thursday evening's meeting. Within a short time the Socialists will announce their platform, as well as the municipal ticket that is to run under the party's colors in the approaching campaign.

Mr. and Mrs. James Brown of Cliff street left this forenoon for Manchester, N. H., where they will pass several days with relatives. Ralph Washburn, who has been passing several days with friends in Barre and vicinity, left on a late forenoon train on a trip through northern Vermont in the interests of the Andrews Paper Co. He will return to his home in Boston late in the week. Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Sanborn, who have been visiting their daughter, Mrs. E. M. Roscoe of French street, returned to-day to their home in Bradford. W. N. Wood, who has been the guest of E. M. Laws of Wellington street for a few days, left at 11:25 for his home in Dorchester, Mass., and Irving Jones, a former resident of Barre, who has been in the city for a week, returned this forenoon to his home in Windsor.

A novel entertainment was given in the opera house last evening, the fourth in the lecture course of the Woman's club, when Benjamin Chapin, in a clever dramatic monologue, represented Abraham Lincoln in "Life at the White House." Tall in stature, Mr. Chapin was well fitted to take the part of Lincoln and there was a marked resemblance between the two, Mr. Chapin's make-up being that of our war president. It is said that some veterans, who knew Lincoln in war time, say Mr. Chapin is almost Mr. Lincoln's counterpart. The monologue was in four parts, beginning with the call of Lincoln to the presidency and his farewell address to his fellow-townsmen, and extending through the vicissitudes of the years of the war, giving insight into his home life, his kindness of heart, his trust in God, his love of a good story and the courage and hopefulness with which he looked toward the end of the war, while heeding heavily the criticisms of some in regard to his attitude. The drama closed with the departure of Lincoln and his wife to attend the theatre on the night of his assassination, and left the audience carrying on in mind the fate of the great man, whose life was so given to thoughtfulness for others, and hope for and trust in the future of the nation. Mr. Chapin filled the role most satisfactorily and gave his hearers a deeper insight into the heart of Lincoln than they had before been privileged to have. There was a large attendance, who spent a pleasant and profitable evening.
